Enid poetic safe space online

By Alvin Jones

Red & Silver Review Editor

Enid resident, Marshall Minor, founded the social media poetic safe space “Minor Thoughts and Details,” after losing his father and not having a place to share the work that his loss inspired.

Inspired by multiple people over the years to keep the page alive, Minor has grown the following to over 200 people from all over the country. “No one knows what the future holds” he stated. “I just hope it continues to inspire as it does today.”

“Minor Thoughts and Details” started as and is still primarily a place to express yourself individually while allowing people of all ages and origins to come together.

“Keep your language clean, be nice to others, and post good content.” Minor said. This page is considered a positive feedback page so it’s a good tool for those who might be afraid of negative comments.

Shortages at local facility leaves staff vulnerable

By Cierra Mardis

Red & Silver Review Staff Writer

Due to the overwhelming staff shortages at Liberty Health Corporation, a local mentally disabled facility, clients have been unable to enjoy activities in the community, causing many to become agitated and hostile towards the already exhausted staff.

“People are having to pull a lot of hours so people are quitting because they are tired,” says employee Rhonda Julian. “This field is very challenging.”

With many clients having attacked staff in the past, Rhonda says the limited employees “leaves staff on the wing more vulnerable”.

When asked if the staff shortages seem to be affecting the clients, Rhonda replied, “Yes. They’re used to doing activities like going out into the community and doing things to keep their mind occupied. Without the staff to take them to do those things, they are stuck in the wing, and they get agitated.”

Liberty Health in Enid works with dually diagnosed clients suffering from mental disabilities, some with years of mental and physical abuse. Clients may enter this Enid facility for a variety of reasons such as criminal activity or the inability to function in society.

“Our company trains us and writes up programs on how to deal with the diagnoses they have,” says Rhonda. “We teach them how to become a normal functioning person in society like keeping a job and learning how to take care of themselves, how to do laundry, how to bathe. They learn to be responsible.”

Staff shortages continue to be an issue across the United States with the omicron covid variant and the call for businesses to pay higher wages.

The Jets prepare for the season opener against NE Nebraska on Monday.
