Sheep center earns awards in Texas

The Northern Oklahoma Sheep Center earned honors at the National Breeding Sheep Show in Taylor, Texas.

The NOC Sheep Production and Management class students fitted and exhibited 12 head of the NOC Sheep Show Flock while attending.

NOC had the Champion Dorset Ram and Reserve Champion Dorset and Dorset Advantage Ewes and the Reserve Champion Hampshire Ram. NOC was also named the Premier Exhibitor of Dorsets.

Students attending the event were Becca Deming, Fairview, Idaho; Greyson Garrett, Geary, Oklahoma; KayAnn Eck, Thomas, Oklahoma; Lexi Vickery, St. Louis, Missouri; Grace Tucker, North Lake, California; Hailey Stone, Newkirk, and Oklahoma.

NOC Students also participated in the Judging Contest and Becca Deming was High Individual with Grace Tucker earning 2nd place in the contest.

This was an inaugural event to replace the loss of the FWSSR Open and Jr. Sheep Shows.

NOC Sheep Center Manager Bart Cardwell said, "A huge thanks goes to the Chisholm Trail Dorper Association volunteers for their efforts with this show."

Over 500 entries participated in the show.

The NOC Sheep Center exhibited the Reserve Champion Ewe in Taylor, Texas last week.

8th ranked Jets open season

The NOC Enid Jets opened the 2021 season Tuesday with an 8-7 win over Hutchinson (KS).

The Jets won the NJCAA National Championship in 2019 and were 8-10 in an abbreviated schedule due to Covid-19 under head coach Scott Mansfield in 2020.

NOC Enid is ranked 8th in the pre-season NJCAA Division 2 poll.

"Overall, I feel really good about where we are at this point in the year," Mansfield said. "As is the goal every year, we're looking to compete at an extremely high level and hopefully put ourselves in position to win some hardware at years end."

Mansfield said the Jets' strengths are a sophomore laden lineup and a talented young pitching staff.

Returning are infielders Ambren Voitik, Cale Savage, Kyle Bass, Brandon Lees, Gage Ninness, and catcher Jordan Coffey. Returning in the outfield are Connor Thaxton and Merek Hawthorne.

"I feel as our sophomore heavy offense and defense will be a big asset for us but we're also excited about our pitching staff that has youth but good tools and talent to give us a chance to win daily," Mansfield said. "The biggest strength though is our chemistry, this alone will take us a long way to achieve our goals."

"It has been nearly a year since we were able to suit up together and compete in the same dug-out so the excitement that we are going through is comparable to little league players going to play their first ever game," Mansfield said. "We cannot wait to get going and see what the future has in store."

An area of concern is the Jets' youth on the mound. The Jets do return Alex Smith, Brandon Eropkin, Justin Raines, Alex Walton, and Thomas Little.

"The youth on the mound will always be an area of concern because of lack of experience and a long gap between game experience will be a little bit of concern early on," he said.

Like every sport, Covid-19 has made it a day to day challenge.

"We've had to experience quarantine on multiple occasions with multiple people and have

Jets' softball opens season today

The NOC Enid Jets' Softball team opens the season today against Iowa Western at 1 p.m. at Failing Field.

NOC is led by coach Megan Hill, in her second year.

After nearly one year away from competition, Hill says her team is ready for the 2021 season to start.

"We are extremely excited to get on the field in a game situation," she said. "We are ready to break up the monotony of everyday practice to see where we are at and what we need to work on."

As in all sports, Covid-19 forced challenges for this season.

"Due to Covid-19 we didn't get to play any fall games so we haven't set foot on a field in a game setting since Mid-March," she said.

"My biggest area of concern is how the freshmen are going to handle to the speed and the power of the college game," Hill added. "We have 14 new players of our 21 on the roster who have never stepped foot on a college field so we are interested to see how they handle the first couple of games."

Hill said she likes the work ethic for her 2021 group.

"This group of kids has been motivated from day 1," she said. "They put in the extra work on their own and they are always getting after it in practice so we are excited to see where we are stand February 5."

Returnees for the Jets include pitchers Ashleigh McCause and Tori McNabb, infielders Slater Eck and Megan Lee, outfielder Josie Stites, and utility players Dru Bryant and McKenzie Richards.

Today's game was originally scheduled for next week but the game was moved due to winter weather next week.

changed plans each time, this was a negative obviously," he said. "But at the same point, it has taught all of us, myself included, to be more adaptive and accepting of change to maximize each opportunity we get to be out on the field and do what we love."

Most importantly, Mansfield said the Jets are excited to be on the field.

"It has been nearly a year since we were able to suit up together and compete in the same dug-out so the excitement that we are going through is comparable to little league players going to play their first ever game," he added. "We cannot wait to get going and see what the future has in store."

Mavs open season ranked 3rd

The Northern Oklahoma College Mavericks opened the 2021 baseball season Tuesdaysplitting a pair of games against Heston.

The Mavs, under 7th year head coach Ryan Bay, are ranked 3rd in the NJCAA pre-season poll.

The Mavs were 23-4 last season when the season was canceled due to Covid-19.

"We've got a good group of guys that have dealt with Covid-19 and the restrictions really well," Bay said. "They've all made personal sacrifices to give our team a chance to play this spring."

Bay said depth of starting pitching should be a key for the Mavs' 2021 season.

"Depth on the mound should be a strength if we can stay healthy," he said. "We return five of our top six arms from last season and have added some very capable freshmen arms and one semester transfer."

Returning pitchers include Jacob Ellis, Jackie Robinson, Josh Bumgarner, Blake Hubbard, Kirby Lohrengel, Chase Defillippo, Zach Stephenson, and Clayton Solomon.

Returning position players include Hayden Priest, Geo Blackshaw, Sam Shank, Holden

Bartosovsky, and Bryant Bailey.

One of Bays' concerns is the lack of preparation time for the Feb. 2 opener.

"We only had 17 days in spring semester to get ready for our season opener on Feb. 2," he said. "We normally get twice that much time to prepare after Christmas break but other schools are dealing with similar scenario so it's something most of us are dealing with."

How did Covid-19 affect the Mavs' preparation for the season.

"It prevented us from playing any outside competition in fall scrimmages," he added. "Those scrimmages are where we normally go through growing pains as a team and find out what areas we need to focus on more and what adjustments we need to try in line ups and pitching rotations. Those are things we'll have to work through on the fly this spring."

Bay said the Mavs are just grateful to be playing.

"We're all just thankful to be given the chance to play this spring. Our guys have worked really hard to this point and can't wait for the season opener."

Mavs' Student Athletes of the Week

Mia Brown and Dylan McLean have been chosen as the NOC Maverick and Lady Maverick Basketball Student Athletes of the Week.

Brown is a sophomore from Mustang, Oklahoma while McLean is a freshman from Brooklyn, New York.

Brown had 14 points, eight rebounds and four steals against Labette last Friday night while McLean scored 18 points in a road win against the Cardinals.

"Mia (Brown) has been battling nagging injuries, so it was good to see her return close to full speed," said coach Greg Krause. "She is a very skilled player who can affect a game in many positive ways."

Mia Brown and Dylan McLean

"Dylan (McLean) did a great job this week," said coach Donnie Jackson. "He hasn't forced anything and has let the game come to him. If he can continue to improve, he could be an X-Factor for us in conference play."

NOC Enid Student Athletes of the Week

NOC Enid Basketball players Abraham Rodriguez and Hollie Wood were named NOC Student Athletes of the Week for Feb. 1.

Rodriguez is a sophomore from Enid, Oklahoma, and Wood is a sophomore from Pryor, Oklahoma.

In two games, Rodriguez scored 17 points and shot 60 percent from 3-point range.

"When we recruited Abe out of Enid, we knew he was a shooter," said coach Chris Gerber. "Now as a sophomore, we can count on Abe to do all the little things right. He is a great leader, takes charges and gets tough rebounds, and has improved being able to take good shots within the offense."

Wood averaged 13 points in two NOC Enid contests.

Hollie Wood and Abraham Rodriguez

"Hollie has been our spark plug from the beginning," said coach Kelli Jennings. "What people see on the floor during a game is exactly what I get to see during practice every day. She's the kind of player every coach wants and needs on their team. I never have to wonder if Hollie is going to go hard or execute what's been asked of her. She made some big time plays at Eastern that kept us in the game. She's a gift to the team."
