Mass Comm Club offers opportunity

by Hannah Lake
The Maverick Staff Writer

Some students at Northern Oklahoma University want to play sports, some want to read and write poems and short stories, and some want to be on the radio or investigate what journalism is all about.

If the last part is what you are looking for, look no further than the Mass Communication Club where you can learn how to write for a newspaper, make advertisements, broadcast at events, and other modern media.

The aim of the Mass Communication Club is to engage the Mass Communication students in activities on the Tonkawa and Enid campuses and to promote the club on both campuses.

Who all can join? Any and all students are welcome to learn about mass communications, even if it is not your major.

Who are the sponsors and when are the meetings? The Mass Communication Club has two sponsors, Mass Comm instructor Dean Percy and Mass Comm Student Newspaper Advisor Scott Cloud. The meetings are called by the sponsors.

What careers can a Mass Communication student have after college? There are a variety of careers in the Mass Communication field like an Information Specialist, a News Reporter/Writer, Photographer, Photojournalist, a Sports Reporter, a Podcaster, an Editor, a Technical Writer, and an On-Air Broadcast Talent.

When can I join? Contact either Dean Percy or Scott Cloud to see when the next meeting will be held and figure out if you will be talking on the Radio on the on-site radio station in Tonkawa, talking at sporting events, or writing for either The Maverick at Tonkawa or Red & Blue Review at Enid.
