NOC Stillwater Alumna

Graduation Year: 2019

Campus: Stillwater

Degree: Associates in Nursing

What makes NOC life-changing?

I started my college career at NOC after graduating high school. My mom, Tammy Davis, has worked at NOC for many years and inspired me to pursue my nursing degree through NOC which has led me to where I am today. The affordability, accessibility and NOCs desire to provide education for all those in need make the school a life-changing place. The staff are very supportive and encouraging and help to make each student's educational experience positive.

What advice would you give new alumni and/or students?

Don't give up on any goals you have set for yourself, talk to your advisors. There is always a way to accomplish your goals. Be studious and always remember what you are working towards, your hard work will pay off.

DAISY Award Recipient information

I am very honored to have recently received the Daisy award which is given to nurses that are nominated by patients or their families for providing excellent care at the bedside.

In a few short sentences tell us about yourself.

I have been a nurse for 5 and half years with most of that time being in the ICU. I graduated from NOC with my nursing degree in 2019 and have been working bedside as a nurse ever since. I would not be where and who I am today without the support of my wonderful family and friends. Being a nurse is a very rewarding career with multitudes of job opportunities and advancements. I highly encourage those that are interested in a medical career to look into nursing, NOC is a great place to kickstart your nursing career!

NOC HOLDS INVESTITURE FOR DIANA MORRIS WATKINS

Diana Morris Watkins' Northern Oklahoma College presidency was made official as the 15th President for NOC.

Watkins has served as president since May 2024 when she was appointed president by NOC regents but Tuesday, she was officially inaugurated as the NOC president with an investiture ceremony at the Kinzer Performing Arts Center on the Tonkawa campus.

Watkins explained her vision for NOC in her presidential address. "When I met with the NOC Board of Regents about the possibility of continuing to serve as president beyond the interim period, she said. "I presented them with a document that outlined my vision for the future of Northern Oklahoma College, building on previous successes of the college and pointing to a pathway for future successes. I broke apart our mission statement and outlined what I thought it truly meant for this institution and for my role as president, confident that if given the opportunity I could lead our extremely capable executive team as we take a look at our processes and procedures searching for ways to create the most efficient and effective path forward for our students."

"I think it's pretty cool to have spent the past twenty years of my life working at the state's first public community college," she added. "Its rich history is beautifully showcased in the AD Buck museum. I'm also excited for all of you to get a chance to see that some of the rich history showcased through stories of our outstanding alumni which are displayed here in the hallways of the Kinzer Performing Arts Center as Faces of NOC and through the Distinguished Alumni showcased out front in the Eleanor Hayes Gallery."

"Being a multi-campus institution allows us to provide some unique programming in different areas," she said. "As your President, I pledged to have a regular presence on each of NOC's three campuses and in each of the four communities where we offer coursework. I hope those of you who are active in the Tonkawa, Enid, Stillwater and Ponca City communities have already recognized that is a priority for me. The partnerships with the local chambers in these communities, with workforce and economic development leaders, with Autry, Meridian, and Pioneer Technology Centers, with the University Center in Ponca City, Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, and Northwestern Oklahoma State University in Enid are vitally important to the successes of Northern Oklahoma College, and I will continue to foster relationships with each of those groups throughout my tenure."

"Providing "high-quality, accessible and affordable educational opportunities and services" requires a strong emphasis on professional development and a strong focus on continuous improvement," she said. "Accessibility is a current strength for NOC through online and Online live course offerings but we can improve how we serve students with diverse needs. replicated in other communities and are currently working to create in more."

NOC President's Emeritus Dr. Cheryl Evans and Dr. Joe Kinzer and the NOC Board of Regents presented the Symbols of the Office to Watkins.

In introducing Watkins, Dr. Evans said she asked those that worked her to sum her up in one word.

Those descriptive words for Watkins include "driven, authentic, optimistic, visionary, energetic, smart, engaged, witty, approachable, capable, genuine, rational, objective, passionate, purpose-driven, wise, astute, sharp, and resilient."

"These words describe the impact that she has already made on the NOC community and what kind of a team player she is," Evans said.

Tonkawa's Kevin Ditmore and Enid's Bert Mackie each spoke about the Tonkawa and Enid communities and NOC's value in those communities. Sondra Ladd, the pastor at First Christian Church in Stillwater, gave the invocation and benediction.

Dennis Casey, the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education, spoke regarding NOC's mission in the education community.

T. L. Walker, the Executive Director of Standing Bear Foundation and the Northern Oklahoma College Tribal Institute, gave Watkins a Native American Blessing.

The NOC Choir and Concert Band performed the Pledge of Allegiance, 'For Good, and the NOC Alma Mater.

The event was followed by a reception at the Renfro Center.
